MRS. GEORGE GOULD
The Home-Life at Georgian Court.

One of the most magnificent country houses in the United States is Georgian Court, at the head of the beautiful lake Carasago, among the tall, straight, lonely pines of Lakewood, N.J., and the wife and mother who makes this place a home is Mrs. George J. Gould, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Kingdon, formerly of Toronto.

The beautiful Edith Kingdon, after completing her education in England, adopted the stage as a career, and her talent, grace, charm and presence were winning recognition when in 1886 she was married to George Gould, the millionaire railway owner, and son of Jay Gould, at one time America's leading financier. Mrs. Gould soon became one of the most popular of the younger society women of the country and a leader in the world of fashion. Beautiful is the house in which she lives, but far more beautiful is the atmosphere of love, sweetest and companion-ship that fills the home with sunshine and happiness. It is said that wealth often makes fair favorites of fortune forgetful of the privileges and joys of motherhood, sacrificing on the altar of fashion, time and attention that should be paid to loving watchfulness of the welfare of the children; but Mrs. Gould is a model mother to her seven children, a devoted companion, confident and friend.

The Goulds are practically the only members of the ultra-fashionable set who reside in the country the year round. Georgian Court, built of light gray brick and terra cotta in the style of the French Renaissance, lies in beautiful grounds rendered exclusive by a high fence of wrought iron with bases and inter-spaced posts of gray stone to match the house. The stables, harmonizing in architecture with the mansion itself, are stocked with horses of every description for the family and guests.

Over the stables is the theatre, a dainty, bijou play-house, complete in every detail, furnished in dark red and gold and seating about one hundred and twenty-five. The Casino, devoted primarily to sport, has a special race-track, a great plunge swimming tank, courts for all games, and about forty bed-rooms and half as many bath-rooms, to be used when a large house-party overtakes the hospitality of the mansion. The Sunken Garden, which is sixty feet in width and 120 in length, is floored and walled with flawless marble, and fine sculpture peeping from a dark background of evergreen shrubs and bushes, is reflected in the clear waters of a lagoon. Near by, too, is the wonderful electric fountain, sixty feet in diameter, of white marble; the centre piece consisting of a colossal Nautilus shell of bronze, forming a chariot on which stands the heroic statue of a man driving a pair of pure marble sea-horses.

THE RECORD-PRESS PRIZE CONTEST

Closed Saturday Afternoon at 6 O'clock—Mrs. J. E. Glass Proving the Winner

The Record-Press Prize Contest came to a successful close Saturday afternoon at 6 o'clock. Just as the town clock commenced to strike the hour of six Senator P. S. Maxwell took the ballot boxes in charge and had them conveyed to his office, when, after supper, the judges, Senator Maxwell, J. H. Orme and J. D. Asher, made the count, that they were able to announce at 9:30 o'clock with the following result.

First Prize, Fine Piano won by Mrs. J. E. Glass 2,021,830

Second Prize, a $15.00 Ladies cloak given by Yandell-Gugenheim Co., won by Miss Addie Maynard 1,637,965

Third Prize a $15.00 Dresser given by W. O. Tucker Furniture Co., won by Miss Gretta Mae Holman 60,660

Fourth Prize a $15.00 Hat, given by Mrs. Eugene Love won by Miss Bertie Jones 40,475

Fifth Prize $15.00 in Photograph by J. L. Stewart the reliable Photographer won by Miss Stella Dean 39,045

Sixth Prize $10.00 set of Rogers knives and forks by Morris & son won by Miss Ruby Cook 23,150

The work done by the two leading contestants has never been equaled. They worked early and late every day. It is said of Miss Maynard that as a solicitor she has never had her equal. Notwithstanding the lateness of the hour she came into the judges quarters after the count and though defeated for the grand prize, thanked them for the fair count and all the trouble they had been put to during the contest. She is a model little lady and worth her weight in gold.

A GOOD MEETING

Rev. U. G. Hughes our pastor at Seven Springs commenced a revival meeting at this place on Monday night Oct. 17, and continued 12 days and a glorious revival it was. Bro. Hughes had no ministerial help at all. Bro. Elder Griffith led the vocal music. The result of this meeting 12 professions of faith in Christ, and eleven of them united with the church and were baptized last Sunday.

Bro. Hughes preached 24 soul stirring sermons and it seemed to reach the hearts of the unconverted for when he would give an opportunity for penitents they would just come flocking to the anxious seat. And I don't believe there was a Christian that attended those services that did not feel the presence of the Holy Spirit. During the services Bro. Griffith sung with the spirit and we feel like he was a powerful help in the meeting.

DEDICATION OF BAPTIST CHURCH

More Money Raised Than was Needed to Clear This Pretty Church of Debt

One of the most successful church dedications the Record-Press ever heard of happened at Salem, Livingston county, Sunday October 23rd. There have been several church organizations in Salem for many years and among the number a Baptist organization. These organizations have a union church building and several of the churches have felt that it would be best if they could have a building of their own. The Baptist finally determined to try to attain this end. There is nothing accomplished in this world without trying and having some little money and a great deal of determination and pure grit, this handful of Baptist undertook the task of building a building. The details of struggle and hard work performed in the building of this house of worship will probably never be written. Up to Sunday October 23rd the property represented an expenditure of about $2,400. Of this sum there was $700.00 yet to be paid. That date was fixed upon as the dedication day and of course there was only one man in Kentucky that could dedicate this building and pull it out of the slough of debt, Dr. Powell of Louisville.

The long trying siege, the hopes and fears of this little handful of Baptists had so worked on their nerves that some of them were fearful that this debt of $700.00 could not be raised. Of course all this was in their minds, only. It had no basis in fact. Those of us who had witnessed Dr. Powell's splendid dedication service here in Marion knew that he would not fail at Salem. The truth is, years ago Dr. Powell opened his unabridged dictionary turned to that word "failure" and deliberately scratched it out. He has no use for it. His dictionary is complete for him without that word.

Sunday October 23rd was a beautiful day. Quite a number of Marion people were on the road early bound for Salem. Among the number were noticed Misses Ruby James, Leaffa Wilborn, Nina Barnes, Della Barnes, Nellie Sutherland and Ethel Boaz, Mr. and Mrs. John Sutherland, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Pierce, Mrs. Florence Yandell. The Salem people of all denominations and all tribes and of no tribe at all put their shoulders to the wheel to see that no one came to Salem that day and went away hungry. It would be no exaggeration to say that five times as many people would have been cared for bountifully. Great baskets and hampers of the best the Salem valley affords were unloaded on the church lot and then in addition there were barbecued six sheep and four hogs. It was a great feast. One Methodist lady declared she was actually ashamed of herself and said to a poor Presbyterian, "Do you suppose these Salem people will think I never had anything to eat in my life before?"

Dr. Powell's sermon was splendid. His original methods in money raising and his strong appeals were a revelation. The seating of the women on one side of the house and the men on the other side and the declaration

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

The Peerless Poet.

THERE are some poets—like Milton—we look up to with awe, so reverent are we that we do not approach their sacred work near enough to read a line of it; others—like Browning—whose beautiful thoughts we accept as pearls for which we must dive bravely through a sea of words to capture them; others—like James Whitcomb Riley—we regard with tender affection, feeling we see his soul in his words, ever sweet, simple, sincere and sympathetic. His writings seem autographic, not merely of Riley but of the unsplotted part of all human nature. The closer a poet writes to the heart of the people, the more fully is the heart of the poet revealed.

In the little village of Greensfield, Ind., where he was born about fifty-four years ago, the son of a Quaker lawyer, he went to school. He did not satisfy the ambitious hopes of his father; he did not take much stock in education; he always stood far down the line in his class; he wanted to be out in the open, swimming near old Kinsey's mills, watching the flight of the birds, learning the trees and the flowers, getting nearer to Nature, absorbing without knowing it all that his heart hungered for and expressing it in pictures and in simple verses he could not help writing. The largest vein in Riley's body is his vein of sentiment and it was gaining tone and strength in those days, when he was only a yellow-haired, untidy, freckling boy.

He ran away from law books one day, to follow a patent medicine peddler who had a wonderful cart which he drove through the country. He was away about a year, painting advertisements signs on the fences to excite the fame of his patron and then he went home and with three folklike madcap fellows like himself, spent three or four years traveling through the State, as tramp painters.

The verse habit was growing on him in the meanwhile and he secured a position on a weekly paper at Anderson, where his first poems appeared. His poem, "Locusts," paraded as a discovery of an unknown poem by Edgar Allan Poe, deceived the ablest literary critics and made him famous and notorious; but it brought him before the public and started him on his wondrously successful career.

Blatant is but one instrument in Riley's hand, it does not contain all his music; for some of his beautiful sonnets and other poems which should give him a worthy place as poet, if he had written nothing else, have no trace of the vernacular of rural Indiana.

that it would cost every man of this little group was the singing. Mr. Barnes, the author and singer, sang the first part of the service. We noticed in the choir, Mr. J. H. Barnes and his two sons, Miss Letta Barnes, Mr. Gray, Miss Harris, Mr. E. L. Trask, Mr. P. H. Sutherland and others. The singing was certainly grand and soul inspiring. The music of the singing could not have been otherwise. Wherever there are few Barnes collected together there is sure to be a good singing. It is born in the home and bred in the muscles of throats to sing and they are like Dr. Powell's darkey that reached for the rooster, they can't help it.

October 23rd 1910 will ever be remembered by the little Baptist church at Salem. It was a glorious day. It was a splendid service. It was a financial success. Nothing but good feeling, prevailed and to the noble people of Salem who tried so hard that these things might be we say, God bless you all.

Dr. Powell made only one mistake during the whole day. The debt to be raised was $700. After the offerings totaled something like $730 the Doctor asked the Secretary what the amount was. He had no idea that it was that much or he would not have asked the question. But the answer was immediately lost in the fog for he did not pay any attention to the figures at all but kept right on with the same speed and when they finally rounded up the total of the offerings was $843.43. It was certainly a splendid showing. Some of the Salem members laughed for joy while others cried for the same reason. One of the most remarkable features of the whole collection was the cash feature. Nearly every subscription was paid on the spot.

Another of the enjoyable features of this gathering was the singing. Mr. Barnes, the author and singer, sang the first part of the service. We noticed in the choir, Mr. J. H. Barnes and his two sons, Miss Letta Barnes, Mr. Gray, Miss Harris, Mr. E. L. Trask, Mr. P. H. Sutherland and others. The singing was certainly grand and soul inspiring. A CHANGE IN LIV-A DEAL IN GROCERY

Oscar Eskew Sells Interest In Morris & Travis, and Weldon & Hicklin Livery Barn to Geo. Foster

The many friends of Oscar Eskew were surprised this week when the news was flashed over town that he had sold his interest in the large livery barn of Eskew & Hicklin, to his genial, clever rival, Geo. Foster who already owns the barn on Main street.

These two stables have, since these gentlemen owned them, been recognized as the two leading livery barns in this end of the state, and while the people are loth to give up so clever and courteous a gentleman as Mr. Eskew, there is not one spark of regret that Mr. Foster is to be his successor. In losing Mr. Eskew we feel to have lost a man who has tried as faithfully as any man could to please and serve the public. But just as sure are they that Mr. Foster will equally care for them. Mr. Hicklin will care for the Salem street stable, while Mr. Foster will rule at the one on Main street.

It will be to your interest to see Dr. Dr. Crawford before having your dental work. Up stairs in Marion Bank building.

WANTED

Men to work in timber on or near Long Branch.

J. G. WOODSON, lackford, Ky.

A surprise sprung on the citizens was the consolidation of the Morris & Travis Grocery Company yesterday with the Weldon-Hina Grocery Co., under the new firm name of Morris-Hina Grocery Company and the business to be conducted at the Weldon-Hina stand on Main street, Mr. Morris having bought out his partner, Mr. Albert Travis and Mr. C. E. Weldon interested in the other firm and Mr. Hina buying sufficient interest in the Morris firm to make them share equal.

The same clerks of both firms went as fixtures and will be retained.

This makes one of the strongest business firms in Marion and with the number of friends to the list of both gentlemen it is but natural to say that a prosperous career will be their.

for training the pupils in thoughtful ways of life. The teacher must plan the lesson, know where the children will need help, whether the lesson calls for inductive or deductive study, whether the book offers sufficient data or whether it must be supplemented, what organization is possible or advisable, what parts she wants memorized, and the main point she thinks should be impressed on the children's minds.

Thus, we see that in order to teach the children to study systematically the teacher must know well her subject matter. Possessing a knowledge of the children's environment, and being familiar with the subject matter are foundations to the third point. That the teacher must be able to direct the various steps involved in the children's mastery of their lessons. When a child gives the reign to fancy, and lets his thoughts wonder where they will, his thinking is of the spontaneous kind; but when he sets himself by the directions of his teacher to accomplish some task, to solve some problem or to find the way out of some difficulty, he controls his thoughts and chooses or rejects the ideas which come into consciousness, taking as a basis of his choice the bearing which these ideas have upon the end he is trying to reach. In each recitation the teacher should arouse expectation and desire which are diverted to unknown objects. Rightly valued and employed, curiosity may be made a valuable agent in teaching. To get the children to study much may be done to arouse their feelings. Some teachers threaten various unpleasant consequences which will be visited upon those who do not complete their work in a certain manner, and at a certain time. The children in order to avoid these consequences bond their unwilling energies to their work and master it. This is not a good way to get children to study. A better way is to make them sure that what you wish to study will be useful to them, that it bears upon some felt need, whether of his own or of the society in which he is interested. This appeal should especially be made to the larger pupils. A teacher who frightens her class who is too serious, or who is sarcastic will not be able to make much progress in training her class to study, since her attitude makes the child's mind a mere record rather than advances. Kindness, fairness, the spirit of cooperation and encouragement are better and will cause the children to respond gladly, and create a friendly relation between teacher and pupils.

The teacher should begin to teach the children to study logically as soon as they enter school. They do not know what studying means, and they should be trained to study logically without consciousness to the method; as they grow older they may become conscious of the effort that they may direct their own studying. In the primary grades the process of training may begin in the oral lessons in literature, reading, arithmetic, and nature study, on any subject being taught. If it is a literature lesson the teacher should read the poem—if it is a poem to be taught carefully to them, tell them that it is a word picture, and talk to them about the scene and read it again and have them to image the scene; then she will teach the poem line or stanza at a time until each can repeat it understandingly. By doing this she will be teaching them to study literature logically and when they become older they can, interpret literature independently. If the lesson is a nature study lesson about birds, she can show them pictures of birds in their own neighborhood, talk about their color, habit use, and tell them to observe the birds as they come or return from school, or better go with them into the woods and observe with them, teaching them the while to study systematically. In arithmetic, the children should be taught numbers in relation to object, the teacher must let them do work with the yard stick, rule and quart measures. Other lessons in the primary grades should be taught in this way that the child may learn to study systematically. All the lesson should be adapted to the pupils. It is a well known law of the human mind that in learning we proceed from the known to the related unknown. Too long lessons are harmful, and teachers should not undertake too much in one lesson to attempt too much is to fail in every thing. In their "busy work" the children should be trained to work quickly and accurately. She can do this by holding the children responsible for their work, praising those who have followed her instructions, and have results of good as she thinks they should be.

What has been about primary grades can be carried on into the intermediate grades. As the children advance they must learn to work more independent, as this is the very core of the art of study. Before the children reach the intermediate grades they have had some written assignments, and are ready to do systematic work. In assigning these lessons it is not enough for the children to be told to get a certain number of pages, but the teacher should prepare the class for right study. She should find out where help is needed, and all points of difficulty should be set in proper light. If the text-book does not contain the data needed, she must tell the children where they can find it. There should be an assignment and a report of the class in a future recitation. This explanation will not take many minutes of the teacher's time, and the children will know what is expected of them, and how to study their lessons logically. In the recitation the children meet the teacher to report what they have learned. The thoughtful teacher will let them answer all the questions, decide whether the points they are considering bear upon the subject, and make all the summaries and outlines. She will correct them when necessary, and explain points they do not understand. By a systematic recitation the children learn to study intelligently.

Children must have freedom to consult maps, books and charts. They should be required to do observation work, make experiments and report the same to the teacher. Children will never become independent workers unless they work independently. If they pass from grade to grade, they can pursue their studies systematically. LULA B. WHEELER.

Believes Government Should Generally Be Leader in Conservation.

SAD EXPERIENCE IN EAST

Addressing Public Meeting In Denver
Ex-President Discusses Water Power
er, Coal Lands, Ranges and Forests
—Powerful Plea for Conservation.

Denver, Colo., Aug. 29. Colonel Roosevelt arrived in Denver from Cheyenne this morning, and after a parade in which representatives of the state and city, the Live Stock association and the Spanish War Veterans took part, was the guest of the Denver Press club at a cowboy luncheon at Overland park. In the afternoon he delivered a public address at the Auditorium and later spoke to the Spanish War Veterans, and then he was the guest of honor at a "round up" dinner at Elitch Temple.

Talks on Conservation.

Mr. Roosevelt's main address was on conservation, and was as follows:

This country has shown definite signs of waking up to the absolute necessity of handling its natural resources with foresight and common sense. The conservation question has been a waste of the natural resources must be stopped. It is rapidly becoming a well-settled policy of this people that we of this generation hold the land in part for the use of our own children, and in part for the use of our own grandchildren. Just as the farmer is a good citizen if he leaves his farm improved and unimpaired for his children, and a bad citizen if he sells it or ruins it, so the citizen of this country is the Nation believes will if he treats the natural resources as assets which must turn over to the next generation increased and unimpaired in value, and better equipped for the use of those who come after us.

In the second place, the natural resources must be developed promptly and completely, and in orderly fashion, not conserving them for the sake of conserving them unduly. Development is an indispensable part of the conservation plan. The forests, the mines, the water-powers, and the land itself, must all be put to use. It is the duty of this generation to propose to the men up, developing this generation of their benefits in order to hand them on untouched to the next, since the whole point of the conservation movement is to make the conservation of the land the mainstay of the policy of the natural rights in the natural resources of the land. All it means is that we of this generation shall so use our riches as not to deprive those who come after us of their share in their turn.

In the third place, so far as possible, these resources must be kept for the whole people and not handed over for exploitation to single individuals. We are not intent on discouraging individual enterprise, but we insist that the rewards for that enterprise, on the contrary, we believe that the men of exceptional ability should have exceptional rewards up to a point where the reward becomes disproportionate to the contribution. Beyond that point the abilities are used to the detriment of the people as a whole. We are for the liberty of the individual up and not beyond the point where it becomes inconsistent with the welfare of the people as a whole. We are not intent on covering the natural talents of men who possess much of the noble dominion by the gift of an education, and the State is a permanent home for the children of men, so far as they are not capable of self-help, but we are not intent on making the State a home for the masses of men.

State and Federal Control.

Some of the most important work has been done in the control of the banks. The Federal Reserve Act, passed in 1913, gave the Federal Reserve Board the power to regulate the money supply and the interest rate. The Federal Reserve Act also gave the Federal Reserve Board the power to regulate the banks. The Federal Reserve Board has been very successful in its work. It has been able to keep the money supply from getting too large and the interest rate from getting too low. It has also been able to keep the banks from getting too big and too powerful. The Federal Reserve Board has been a very important part of the Federal Government. It has been able to keep the money supply from getting too large and the interest rate from getting too low. It has also been able to keep the banks from getting too big and too powerful. The Federal Reserve Board has been a very important part of the Federal Government.

In the matter of conservation, I have no assurance of state action where our form of government the state, and the state only, has the power to act. I can only join with those who desire to act for the state within its own sphere, take the most advanced position in regard to the whole matter of conservation. I have taken exactly this attitude in my case. The state of New York, where the state alone had power to act, I have done all I could.

to get it to get in 'the most advanced manner; and where the Nation could do it I have done all I could to get National action in the same direction. Unfortunately, under the present administration, we have paid the penalty of not having our country under National control; and the penalty has been severe. Most of the states—although they are old states—have not protected their forests, and have neglected the common concern of all, and which is the common concern of all. Experience has shown that it can only profitably undertaken by the National Government.

As a result of the impossibility of getting such wise action by the several state governments in the east, we are doing our best to get National legislation under the National Government. The expense of millions of dollars, shall undertake to do as regards the Appalachian and White Mountains of the east which is now doing in the Rock Mountains here. It is a very serious matter, and an absurdity for the National Government now to do in the west the thing that at a heavy pecuniary cost it is trying to undo in the east. By actual experience in the east, and not by theory, we know that the National Government, as the National Government, can best guard the interests of the people in the matter of the forest.

and the waters, and that if it fails to attempt this duty at the outset it will later on have to pay heavily in order to be allowed to take up the work, which because it is done so late, cannot be so well done as if it had been begun earlier.

Water Power.

Take the question of the control of the water power sites. The enormous importance of water power sites to the future industrial development of this country has only been realized within a very few years. The water power sites have come too late as regards many of the power sites; but many yet remain within which our hands are free to deal. We should make it our duty to see that hereafter the power sites are under the control of the general government, for the use of the people as a whole. The fee should remain with the people as a whole, while the use is leased on terms which shall secure an ample reward to the investor. The government should develop and use of the water power sites but which shall not create a permanent monopoly or permit the development to be anticompetitive, to be in any respect hostile to the public interest. We should make it our policy to do this effectively, and if it is for the reason that you will find those corporations which wish to gain immense advantage and to be freed from effective control on the part of the public, doing so, it is the duty of the government to prevent it. It is the duty of the National action.

There is something fairly comic in the appeal made by many of these men in favor of state control when you realize that the great corporations seeking the privileges of developing the water power of the Nation are the same corporations that are being controlled by the Nation in this country, now, days, capital has Nationalized and is a state issue. The great corporations which are managed and controlled in the other states are in the same position as to the National Government and using the money and weapons and for sale of the new territories and the new states from Alaska to Arizona. I have been a simple citizen of the past two months and having again been in some of the great cities of the Nation from New York and Ohio for instance, as to why Colorado and other Rocky Mountain states should manage their own water power sites. Now this can may be good citizens according to their rights, but nature is enough to tell us that the water power sites of the public need and as their ability is to escape an efficient control, exercised by the highest of all the people of the country, the danger to be put under the trusteeship of under the Nation. If we are to have a National Government, we shall have ourselves to blame when we will go to find that we have permitted another privilege to baronize itself and another portion of what should be kept for the public good to be turned over to individuals and concerns of private interests. During the last session of Congress bills were introduced to transfer the water power sites in the Nation Forests and the Public Domain to the control of the states. I cannot state to you my belief that these measures are a step toward the right direction, but tends to entrap them into law, in substance their effect would be to free these great special interests from all Federal control. The passage of such a bill would be the victory of the special interests over the Nation. I am sure that the Nation stands upon the bill of progress we have before the Congress.

Our people have, for many years, protested against the assumption that the Nation should control the public land. It is this assumption of National control that we owe our worst land legislation from the Homestead Law to the Irrigation Law. The wise use of our public domain has always been conditioned upon National action. The states can greatly help, but the Nation must take the lead, as regards the land, as regards the forests and waters, and perhaps peculiarly in the case of the waters, because almost all streams are really inter-state streams.

Coal Lands.

The same principle applies with peculiar force to the coal lands and especially to the coal lands in Alaska, whose production and ownership by the Federal government is so necessary, both for fuel and free industrial development in the west, and for the needs of our fleet in the Pacific. The coal mines should be leased, not sold, and those who mine the coal should pay back a part of the profit to the people. It is the right and duty of the people to demand the most vigorous participation on that part of that branch of the Federal government in charge of the fuel resources of the United States.

The Neutral Ground.

Remember also that many of the men who protest loudly on just exactly national action would be the first to object to any such action if it were not on such information as the two have received, and would then not only invoke the law of the land but the state and no constitutional amendment. It is in the name of the people of the United States that I speak, and I speak in the name of the people of the United States who are so difficult for the nation to get at, and I speak in the name of the people of the United States who are so difficult for the nation to get at, and I speak in the name of the people of the United States who are so difficult for the nation to get at.

If there is one thing which is more unwise than another, it is the creation by legislative, by executive, or by judicial action of a neutral ground, which neither the state nor the nation has power, and which can serve as a place of refuge for the lawless man, and especially for the lawless man of great wealth, who can hire the best legal counsel to advise him how to keep his abiding place equally distant from the uncertain frontiers of both state and national power.

The Open Range

I am here at the invitation of the Colorado Livestock association, and desire to express my appreciation for their steadfast stand for decency and progress in the handling of public lands and national forests. I have been a member of the Colorado Livestock association since its inception, and my position of some of the most influential stockmen of the state; they have because they have been right. I want to express also my appreciation of the American National Livestock association. It has been one of the most important forces working toward effective railway regulation, while the support of the policy of federal range control has given it the prestige of a national law. As an old-time stockman I realize that the present crop of things on the open range can continue, and that the sure way to protect the range itself, prevent the encroachment of the private, and the equitable use of the grazing lands, and foster genuine homestead settlement, is to extend over the open range a system of range control somewhat similar to that now in effect on the national forests.

Whatever system of range control may be adopted in detail, there are a few things it must not do. It must not handicap or exclude the small man by requiring him to spend more money for fences than he can afford, and it must leave every acre that can be settled by bona-fide homesteaders freely open to such settlement.

I do not believe that a single acre of our public lands should hereafter pass into private ownership except for the single purpose of being used for the benefit of the people. I know that the stockmen stand with me in their desire to remove every obstacle from the path of the genuine homesteader, and to put every possible obstacle in the way of the single purpose of getting public lands by misrepresentation or fraud. This is absolutely necessary on the agricultural lands. It is at least equally necessary on the mineral lands. The effect on the average citizen we can scarcely exaggerate, if the great stores of coal and other mineral fuels still owned by the people in Alaska and the great oil and gas pay in the United States are to be placed in the unregulated ownership of monopolistic corporations.

The Forest Service. You progressive stockmen have floodhently by the conservation movement, and with you have stood many others throughout the West, to whom large credit is due, such as the lumbermen of the Northwest, the great irrigators in California, and the supporters of the country life movement in and around Spokane. I want to make my acknowledgments in particular to the Colorado Forestry association, for their work in the forestry work of the government with such unselfish zeal. The forest service has enemies because it is effective. Some of its best work has been met by the bitterest opposition. For example, it has done a great deal of work to protect, and actually by standing like a rock against the demands of horsemanning concerns to exploit the national forests. I have always done my best to help the genuine miner. I believe in the right of the miner to mine, but I want to encourage honest mining on the public lands. But it is equally important to enforce the law firmly against that particularly dangerous class which makes its living off the public through fraudulent mining.

with the opposition to the forest conservation, like much of the opposition to conservation, takes the form of direct misrepresentation. For example, it is often heard that the national forests include great areas of agricultural land. This is not true. The only agricultural land in the reach of settlement. This statement is not sensibly only tall tales. The facts are known. In the first place, conservation has specifically provided that wherever agricultural land there may be, any national forest shall be so designated that such land shall be exempted from settlement. And in the second place, wherever the opportunity of conservation are asked to point out the great stretches of enclosed agricultural land on the government ground and in the presence of a very real need of in speeches in a hall, the full

Reclamation Service

The National Irrigation Congress is to hold a session in the city of Portland in September. I am kindly asked that I could not have accepted its invitation to be present. I must however, be here for the Gaiety of the Butte and I cannot be present then to express my keen, long-held, and deep-felt interest in the reclamation of arid lands by the federal government. I desire to do so now. There is no more important need in the United States than to have the United States Reclamation Service, and no government bureau while I was President had reached a higher standard of efficiency, integrity and devotion to the public well-being.

[illegible]

I don't think that there is any more important issue before a better and more thorough going westerner than I am. There has been no support given to the conservation policies so welcome as that which came from the west, and none in the west more welcome than that which came from Colorado. There are men and organizations in Colorado, and I mention Delta in particular, whose support of the conservation policies has been of the greatest value to the Nation. It has not always been so. It is something for which I am glad that we are standing. The west has been right in standing for the real ultimate good as against the seeming temporary good; but they have stood for it steadily nevertheless.

From the standpoint of conservatism the east has wasted much of its own superb endowment; and as an American as a lover of the west, I hope that the west will profit by the east's bitter lesson, and will not repeat the mistakes of the east. The east has wasted its resources, it suffers from the effect of the waste, which now puts it at a disadvantage compared to the west, and it is sorry. Most of the capital and very many of the men now attempting to monopolize power in the western states are from the east. The west should learn the lesson of the east's mistakes, and should remember that conservation of the west will help the west first and most, and that the movement for conservation is most earnest, most vigorous and most effective in the west. I am sure that the men who are so strong regarding the conservation policy has come to stay.

Frequent Changes of Name.
The political rechristening of street in Paris is outdone by the case of the Island of Reunion, which changed its name four times in just over half a century. In 1793 it was Bourbon, it had been for a century and a half but the convention then changed it to Reunion. Under the empire it became Ile Bonaparte, at the restoration it reverted to Bourbon, and finally, in 1848, it became Reunion once more. So the septuagenarian islanders of this last year could recall an unparalleled series of compulsive changes. They must have thought themselves lucky a few years later when the second empire refrained from Bonapartizing this island again.

CONSERVATION IS PATRIOTIC DUTY

Roosevelt at St. Paul Advocates New Methods.

WASTE AND MONOPOLY WRONG

Waterways and Forests Discussed—State and Federal Control—Country Life Institute Is Favored.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 6.—Theodore Roosevelt was the central figure in the conservation congress today, and delivered an address that called forth the warmest praise of those who were fortunate enough to hear it. The fact that the former president was to speak attracted to the convention hall a tremendous crowd, and the man who has made conservation one of the chief issues in the United States was given the heartiest kind of a greeting.

Taking "National Efficiency" for his general subject, Mr. Roosevelt said: America's reputation for efficiency stands deservedly high throughout the world. We are efficient probably to the full limit that any nation can attain by the methods hitherto used. There is good reason to be proud of our achievements, and yet no reason to believe that we cannot exceed our past. There is practically unrestrained individualism. We have reached a pitch of material unexampled material progress, although the distribution of this prosperity leaves much to be desired from the standpoint of justice and fair dealing. But we have not only allowed the individual a free hand, which was in the main right; we have also allowed great corporations to act as though they were individuals, and to exercise the rights of individuals, in addition to using the vast combined power of high organization and enormous wealth for their own advantage. This development of corporate action, it is true, doubtless, in large part responsible for the gigantic development of our natural resources, but it is not less responsible for waste, destruction, and monopoly on an equally gigantic scale.

The method of reckless and uncontrolled private use and waste has done for us all the good it ever can, and it is time to put an end to it before it does all the evil it easily may. We have passed the time when heedless waste and destruction, and arrogant monopoly, are any longer possible. We must work for a new and a better way, by the way of the orderly development and use, coupled with the preservation, of our natural resources by making the most of what we have for the benefit of all of us, instead of leaving the sources of material progress open to indiscriminate exploitation. These are some of the reasons why it is wise that we should abandon the old point of view, and why conservation has become a patriotic duty.

Waterways Development. One of the greatest of our conservation problems is the wise and prompt development and use of the waterways of this Nation. The Twin Cities, lying as they do at the headwaters of the Mississippi, are not upon the direct line of the proposed lake to the Gulf deep waterway. Yet they are deeply interested in its prompt completion, as well as in the developing and regulation of the Mississippi to the mouth of the Missouri and to the Gulf. The project for a great trunk waterway, an arm of the sea, extending from the Gulf of Mexico to the Great Lakes, should not be abandoned. The lake to the Gulf deep waterway, and the development of the rivers which flow into it, should be pushed to completion vigorously and without delay. To nearly every river city from St. Paul to the Gulf the water-front is controlled by the levees. Nearly every artificial waterway in the United States, either directly or indirectly, is under the same control. It goes without saying that future development of the waterways of the country will attempt to take control of our waterways as fast as they are improved and completed; nor would I blame them. If we the people are supreme in the matter, we must see to it that adequate terminals are provided in every city and town on every improved waterway. Terminal open under reasonable conditions to the use of every citizen, and rigidly protected against monopoly; and we must channel the waterways to co-operate with the waterways continuously, effectively, and under reasonable conditions. Unless we do so the railway lines will refuse to deliver freight to the boat lines, either openly or by imposing prohibitory conditions, and the waterways once improved will be comparatively little for the benefit of the people who they are intended to serve. Adequate terminals properly controlled and open through lines by rail and boat are two absolutely essential conditions to the usefulness of inland waterway development. I believe furthermore that the railways should be prohibited from owning, controlling, or carrying any interest in the boat lines on our rivers, unless under the strictest regulation and control of the Interstate Commerce Commission, so that the shippers' interests may be fully protected.

The National Forests. If any proof were needed that forest protection is a National duty, the recent destruction of forests in the west by fire would supply it. Even with the aid of the army and navy to that of the forest service the loss has been severe. Without either it would have been vastly greater. But the forest service does more than protect the National forests against fire. It protects the people's health and increasing by useful work. During the last year for which I have the figures the National forests were used by 22,000 cottagers with their families, 5,000 school children with their teachers and their parents. More than 8,000,000 people were on other special forest lands, and 21,000 settlers had the right of use. The total resident population of the National forests is about a million, which is less than the population of certain States. The National forests are a source of income to the Government, and have been patented or leased to private individuals, and the Government is the greatest owners of land in the United States. The forest service is the greatest owners of land in the United States. The forest service is the greatest owners of land in the United States.

Country Life Institute. The investigations of the Country Life Commission have led the farmers of this country to realize that they have not been getting their fair share of progress and all that it brings. Some of our farming communities in the Mississippi valley and in the middle west have made marvelous progress, yet even the best of them, like communities of every other kind, are not beyond improvement, while much needs to be done in some other sections to improve country life. As yet we know comparatively little of the basic facts of rural civilization. The means for better farming we have studied with care, but to better living on the farm and to better business on the farm the farmers themselves have given scant attention. One of the most urgent needs of our civilization is that the farmers themselves should undertake to get for themselves a better knowledge along these lines, and then to apply it. Sir Florence Plunkett, for many years a Wyoming cattleman, and now dating himself in Ireland to the country life problem there, has suggested in his recent book on the "Country Life Problem in America" the creation of a Country Life Institute as a center where the work and knowledge of the whole world concerning country life may be brought together for the use of every nation. I am strongly in sympathy with this idea, and I hope to see it carried out with the co-operation and assistance of our own people. Last spring, while visiting the capital of Hungary, Buda-Pesth, I was immensely impressed by the Museum of Country Life, containing an extraordinary series of studies in agriculture, in stock-raising, in forestry, in mining; the exhibits were of the utmost practical importance and were also intensely interesting and instructive.

As a people we have not yet learned to economize. One of the virtues we Americans most need is thrift. It is a mere truism to say that luxury and extravagance are not good for a Nation. So far as they affect character, the loss they cause may be beyond computation. But in the material sense the loss is less; greater than is caused by both extravagance and luxury put together. I mean the needless, useless, and excessive loss to our people from premature death and avoidable diseases. Wholly apart from the grief, the suffering, and the expense which they cause, the material loss each year has been calculated at nearly twice what it costs to run the Federal government. In addition to the state and city health officers and organizations, there is urgently needed a Federal bureau of health, to act as the National government properly may, to relieve our people from this dreadful burden.

National Conservation Commission. One of the most important meetings in our recent history was that of the governors in the white house in May, 1908, to consider the conservation question. By the advice of the governors, the meeting was followed by the appointment of a National conservation commission. The meeting of the governors directed the attention of the country to conservation as nothing else could have done, while the work of the commission has been the movement definiteness and supplied it with a practical program. But at the moment when the commission was ready to begin the campaign for putting its program into effect an amendment to the Sundry civil service bill introduced by Congressman from Minnesota with the purpose of putting a stop to the work so admirably begun. Congress passed the amendment. Its object was to put an end to the work of a number of commissions, which had been appointed by the president, and whose contributions to the public welfare had been simply incalculable. Among these had been the commission for reorganizing the business methods of the government, the public lands commission, and the National conservation commission itself. When I signed the Sundry civil service bill containing this amendment, I transmitted with it as my last official act a memorandum declaring that the amendment was void, because it was an unconstitutional interference with the rights of the executive and that I would remain president I would pay to it no attention whatever.

The National conservation commission thereupon became dormant. The suspension of its work came at a most unfortunate time, and there was serious danger that the progress already made would be lost. At this critical moment the National conservation association was organized. It took up the work which otherwise would not have been done, and it exercised a most useful influence in securing better legislation, in securing the introduction of better conservation measures at the past session of congress and in promoting the passage of wise laws. It deserves the confidence and support of every citizen interested in the conservation and preservation of our natural resources, and in preventing them from passing into the hands of uncontrolled monopolies. It joins with the National conservation congress in holding this meeting. I am here by the joint invitation of both.

Pan-American Construction. When the government of the United States awoke to the idea of conservation and saw that it was good, it lost no time in communicating the advantages of the new point of view to its immediate neighbors among the nations. A North American conservation conference was held in Washington, and the result was the Pan-American conference in Mexico in the great problem of developing the resources of the continent for the benefit of its people was asked and promised. The nations upon our northern and southern boundaries wisely realized that the conservation of the natural resources was better than ours, because with them destruction and monopolization had not gone so far as they had with us. So it is with the republics of Central and South America. Obviously they are on the verge of a period of great material progress. The development of their natural resources—their forests, their mines, their water, and their soils—will create enormous wealth. It is to the mutual interest of the United States and our sister American republics that they should develop them wisely. Our manufacturing industries offer a market for more and more of their natural wealth and raw material, while they will increasingly desire to meet that demand in commercial exchange. The more we buy from them, the more we shall sell to them. Their prosperity is inseparably involved with our own. Thank heaven, we of this continent are now beginning to realize, what all the world will realize, that it is a good thing for a nation to have its neighbor nations prosper.

We of the United States are genuinely and heartily pleased to see growth and prosperity in Canada, in Mexico, in South America. It is clear that unless the governments of our southern neighbors take steps in the near future by wise legislation to control the development and use of their natural resources, they will probably fall into the hands of concessionaires and promoters, with single purpose, without regard to the permanent welfare of the land in which they work, will be to make the most possible money in the shortest possible time. There will be shameful waste, destructive loss, and short-sighted disregard of the future, as we have learned by bitter experience here at home.

Unless the governments of all the American republics, including our own, enact in time such laws as will both protect their natural wealth and promote their legitimate and reasonable development, future generations will suffer misfortunes to us of today. A great patriotic duty calls upon us. We owe it to ourselves and to them to give the American republics all the help we can. The case in which we have failed should be no less instructive than the cases in which we have succeeded. With prompt action and good will the task of saving the resources for the people is full of hope for us all.

State and Federal Control.

But while we of the United States are anxious, as I believe we are able, to be of assistance to others, there are problems of our own which we cannot overlook. One of the most important conservation questions of the moment relates to the control of water power monopoly in the public interest. There is apparent tendency on the part of our opponents to cloud the issue by raising the question of state as against federal jurisdiction. We are ready to meet that issue if it is forced upon us. But there is no hope for the plain people in such conflicts of jurisdiction. The essential question is not one of half-splitting legal technicalities. It is simply this: Who can best regulate the public interests for the public good? Most of the predatory corporations are interstate or have interstate affiliations. Therefore they are largely out of reach of effective state control, and fall of necessity within the federal jurisdiction. One of the prime objects of those among them that are grasping and greedy is to avoid any effective control either by state or nation; and they advocate at this time state control simply because they believe it to be the least effective. In the great fight of the people to drive the special interests from the domination of our government, the nation is stronger and its jurisdiction is more effective than that of any state. The most effective weapon against these great corporations, most of which are financed and owned on the Atlantic coast, will be federal laws and the federal executive. That is why I so strongly oppose the demand to turn these matters over to the states. It is fundamentally a demand against the interest of the plain people, of the people of small means, against the interest of our children and our children's children; and it is primarily in the interest of the great corporations which desire to escape all government control.

The Conservation Fight.

On the difficulties in putting into practice the conservation idea is that the field to which it applies is constantly growing in the public mind. It has been no slight task to bring before 100,000 people a great conception like that of conservation, and convince them that it is right. This much we have accomplished. But there remains much to be cleared up, and many misunderstandings are doing in part at least to drive misrepresentation by the men to whose interest it is that conservation should not prosper. For example, we find it constantly said by men who should know better, that the temporary withdrawal of the public lands from the sale of coal lands, will permanently check development. Yet the fact is that these withdrawals have no purpose except to prevent the coal lands from passing into private ownership until congress can pass laws to open them to development under conditions that will do the public and to the men who will do the developing. If there is delay, the responsibility for it rests, not on the men who made the withdrawals to protect the public interest, but on those who prevent congress from passing laws which will do the public and to the men who will do the developing. If there is delay, the responsibility for it rests, not on the men who made the withdrawals to protect the public interest, but on those who prevent congress from passing laws which will do the public and to the men who will do the developing.

Abuses committed in the name of a just cause are familiar to all of us. Many unwise things are done and many unwise measures are advocated in the name of conservation, either through ignorance, or through the interest of those who are not in the movement, but in retarding it. For example, to stop water power development by needless refusal to issue permits for water power or private irrigation works on the public lands in the country, is a mistake. While the conservation and many men, who are thoroughly loyal to the cause, are ready to conserve, to assume that its practical application is necessarily a check upon progress. Nothing could be more mistaken. The idea, widely circulated of late, that conservation means the locking up of the natural resources for the benefit of future generations, is wholly mistaken. Our purpose is to make full use of these resources, but to consider our sons and daughters as well as ourselves. Just as a farmer uses his farm in ways to preserve its future usefulness, so we must use the natural resources in ways to preserve their future usefulness. Conservation is the road to national efficiency, and it stands for ample and wise development.

But in spite of these difficulties, most of which are doubtless inevitable in any movement of this kind, conservation has made marvelous progress. I have been abroad at the progress made while I was away. We have a right to congratulate ourselves on this marvelous progress; but there is no reason for believing that the fight is won. In the beginning the special interests, who are the chief opponents of the conservation fight, paid little heed to the movement, because they neither understood it, nor saw that if it won they must lose. But with the progress of conservation in the minds of our people the fight is getting sharper. The nearer the opposition that we must meet, and the greater the need for caution and watchfulness. Open opposition we can overcome, but I warn you especially against the men who come to congress, such as this, ostensibly as disinterested citizens, but actually as the paid agents of the special interests. I heartily approve the attitude of any corporation, interested in the deliberations of a meeting such as this, which comes hither to advocate its own interests as disinterested citizens, which its openly accredited agents, views which it believes in its meeting should have in mind. But I condemn with equal readiness the appearance of a corporate agent before any convention who does not declare himself frankly as such.

This congress is a direct appeal to the patriotism of our whole people. The patriotic citizen looks to such gatherings for counsel and leadership. Let that leadership be sound, definite, practical, and on the side of all the people. It would be no small misfortune if a meeting such as this should fall into the hands of the great enemies or false friends of the great movement which it represents. It is our duty and our desire to make this land of ours a better home for the race, but our duty does not stop there. We must also work for better government, for a better land. The development and conservation of our national character and our free institutions must go hand in hand with the development and conservation of our natural resources, which the government, of our prosperity. Whatever progress we may make as a nation, whatever wealth we may accumulate, however far we may push mechanical development and production, we shall never reach a point where our welfare can depend in the last analysis on anything but honesty, courage, loyalty, and good citizenship. The homely virtues are the lasting virtues, and the road which leads to them is the road to genuine and lasting success.

What this country needs is what every free country must set before it as the great goal toward which it works—an equal opportunity for life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness for every one of its citizens. To achieve this end we must put a stop to the improper political domination of the country by the economic domination of the great special interests. This country, its natural resources, its natural advantages, its opportunities and its institutions, belong to all its citizens. They cannot be enjoyed fully and freely unless they are under the control of the special interests as such have a voice. The supreme political task of our day, the indispensable condition of national efficiency and national welfare, is to drive the special interests out of the public life.

Constipation Cure Free

With the first signs of constipation you resort to the home methods of relief, such as hot or cold water on arising, lots of stewed fruit with your breakfast, etc., but what do you do when these fail?

The majority then start on salts and purgative waters, then change to cathartic pills, etc. If you have gone through these various stages you know they are all useless, so far as permanent results go. Now you should try just once again, but try something practical and sensible, a remedy made for the purpose of the purpose you are trying to accomplish. Such a remedy, as thousands can testify, is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is guaranteed to be permanent in its results. Its ingredients are such that by brief use of it the stomach and bowels are trained to again do their work normally, so that in the end you can do away with medicines of all kinds. That it will do this Mr. G. Y. Dodson of Sanville, Va., will gladly attest, and so will Mrs. S. A. Hampton of Portage, O.

To those who are still skeptical there is a way to prove these assertions without a penny of expense: Simply send your name and address for a postal card to obtain a free sample bottle. If you are then convinced it is the remedy you need, buy a fifty cent or one dollar bottle of your druggist and continue to use it for a brief time absolutely cured. The directions are simple and the dose is small. It is pleasant to the taste, does not gripe and is promptly effective, and these statements are guaranteed or money will be refunded. This remedy is over a quarter of a century old and is personally taken by more druggists than any other similar remedy on the American market. Because of its effectiveness, purity and pleasant taste it is the ideal laxative remedy for the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely cured. Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely cured. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card, otherwise, for either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, R. 500, Caldwell, Mo.

Notwithstanding the order to keep children at home and the small attendance at Sunday school, the collection at the M. E. Sunday school with but 70 present, was above $8.00 and at the Baptist church with so much to thank God for at home, good

Bro. Miller reminded his flock that he thought a donation in order for missions and in but a few minutes $155.05 was raised, and this was after this same congregation had recently raised more than $500.00 for the same purpose.

Mrs. J. G. Thurman of near Fredonia who was removed to Walkers Sanitarium at Evansville last week, at which place she underwent a very difficult operation in which one third of her stomach was removed, is reported improving rapidly. This information comes from Dr. Walker to Dr. T. Atchison Frazer of this city.

The Kentucky Cumberland Presbyterian Synod met here last week from which our town has received benefits in more ways than one. In the coming together of so large a body of consecrated men and women, ministers and laymen, from all parts of the state there are many lessons to be learned and one can have a better idea of what the religious world for Christ's sake is doing and bearing witness to their work, but fits us the better for living the remainder of our lives. Every town should be proud to invite the convening of all such religious bodies and the best welcome you can give them is but small pay for the good you get out of it and the reward it brings in after years.

When epidemics strike a town the inhabitants are usually slow to believe it and yet just as slow in trying to suppress it, and worst of all, when the health officer issues an order or authorizes a quarantine, instead of meeting with the approval of all his order and power to prevent the spread of the fatal or loathsome disease is checked and he is condemned instead of praised. This is not right for surely the health officer has the best interest of his town at heart and every citizen should back him up. Just notice if you will, when ever the citizens of a town stand by their health officer, how quick the disease is stamped out as in the case of Dr. Frazers order last Thursday. Had he not issued his order and had the people failed to heed it, it is natural to believe the dread diptheria might have entered several homes with fatal results.

While Sunday night was hallowe'en on account of the Holy day and the church going habit of our citizens, the spooks put off their roaming until Monday night. Even to those who had been sufficiently burdened with the toils of the day to feel to want to go to their rest early, could see in the very air and from the moaning of the wind, that goblins fair as well as demons damned, would in all probability leave their several footprints in the many streets and the magic wand would be wielded in front of many homes before they melted away in the smoke and vapor at the approach of the hour when the great spook called them to their rest. And they were not wrong, for early as eight-thirty, Marshall Cannan as well as many others could see spirits flitting from place to place and that from the sounds emanating from Foh's novelty store, "The Mine" and the shapes and vis-ages in transit, things would be enacted that were Poe to come back from the spirit world he would see food for a poem that would put the "Raven" forever on the shelf. There is a strangeness about how things will act on this particular night. How out houses will turn over, farm implements and old wagons in front of blacksmith shop waiting for repair will get a move on themselves, gates jump off their hinges summer chairs climb telephone poles, family pomes, cats and dogs, except bull dogs, change their color and how an old wheat drill that only a pair of the best farm horses could induce to move would be seen roaming around on Main street, and seated on the seat box a number of spookies singing "We went go home 'till morning." But such is Hallowe'en and such it has been to our dear fathers and mothers and if an old wagon should get so gay as to jump on top of a house, it is nothing more than used to happen in the days of the long ago.

FAMILY REUNION.

A grand family reunion was held in honor of Rev. W. R. Gibbs sixty-ninth birthday at the home of W. R. Gibbs, Junior. Brother Gibbs's children made it known among themselves that they would entertain their father by suprising him with a birthday dinner each one furnishing their part to make the day enjoyable and it is needless to say it was well done. The writer feels almost like one of the children having lived with the family in past years knowing Bro. Gibbs as a brother as a christian gentlemen as father always pointing to higher power for sustenance for true manhood.

Bro. Gibbs is one of leading missionary Baptist ministers of the Ohio Valley Association, he has been preaching thirty seven years, has served thirty three churches, is sixty-nine years young as he calls it and he proved it to the guests on this eventful occasion. Bro. Gibbs has four children living: namely—W. R. Gibbs Jr. married Miss Emma Hughes, daughter of Wm. Hughes, Annie Stephenson wife of Rush Stephenson, Mary Lottie Ralston wife of Edwin Ralston and Florence Brasier wife of Clint Brasier. Bro. Gibbs has thirteen grand-children and they were all present at the reunion with a number of friends and relatives.

After the extension table was extended to an enormous length then filled with good things to numerous to mention, you could hear the children say I wonder why Pa don't come? wonder what is the matter, seeming to forget all that were present in their anxiety for Pa to arrive. By and by old trusty Ned was seen far down the lane, as he neared his destination the shout went up yonder comes Pa till he and his wife (who added much pleasure to the occasion) were seated at the table. Then it was whispered I wonder what Pa will say and if you never heard true thanks offered at a table you should have been with us when Pa poured out his heart to God for thanks to his children and for the good things they had set before him, the silent tears that stole down his cheeks were proof that God was in the occasion. After dinner was served to the hearts content of all that were present, we repaired to the family room and engaged in general conversation each one expressing theirself as a day long to be remembered. When time came to part Rev. C. S. Gregston of Dawson Springs was asked to read a lesson from the scripture which he did, reading from the 60th psalm, commenting upon this and some quotations from the 23 psalm which was very appropriate for the occasion after which Rev. J. C. Kinsolven lead in prayer and one united petition went up to God that Bro. Gibbs birthdays may be numbered over and over again and that Gods blessing might rest up-on him and his family and that they may all unite in the family reunion above.

Have Faith in Yourself. There is a tremendous power in the habit of expectancy, the conviction that we shall realize our ambition, that our dreams shall come true. There is no uplifting habit like that attitude of expecting that our heart yearnings will be matched with realities; that things are going to turn out well and not ill; that we are going to succeed; that no matter what may or may not happen, we are going to be happy, says Success.

There is nothing else so helpful in the carrying of this optimistic, expectant attitude—the attitude which always looks for and expects the best, the highest, the happiest—and never allowing oneself to get into the pessimistic, discouraged mood.

Believe with all your heart that you will do what you were made to do. Never for an instant harbor a doubt of this. Drive it out of your mind if it seeks entrance. Entertain only the friendly thoughts or ideals of the thing you are bound to achieve. Reject all thought enemies, all discouraging moods—everything which would even suggest failure or unhappiness.

Wasted Effort.

It is said that a California poet was badly handled by his wife because he neglected to support the family.

When they asked for bread he gave them a sonnet, and when they clamored for pie he came across with a madrigal.

Nevertheless, it doesn't seem quite right for his wife to reach over and snatch tufts from his cranium cover and batter his shins with benchmark shoes and crack his slate with a broom handle. That sort of treatment doesn't bring results. A poet with a black eye and a twisted neck and a dented kneecap is no more useful than a poet in perfect order.

What the lady should do would be to have her poet hubby pick up some side trade that would promise financial results—as they did in Indiana, where you will find the baker writes poetry and so do the hairdresser and the motorman and the bartender. But there is no use attempting to club money out of a poet.

AN IDEAL MAN AND HOW MADE

A Paper Read Before A Great Holiness Meeting at Meridian, Miss. by Dr. Besire.

When God made man He made him with a threefold nature—body, mind and spirit, capable of untold development. The ideal man is one that has all three of his natures developed in the proper way and proper proportion. It is a presumption to think that we are prepared for life with only one side of our nature developed and trained. The ideal man is one that has the highest possible development of spirit, mind and body.

God has given us the ideal in Adam and in Christ, the second Adam, and although the Devil has marred man and dragged him down, yet through the second Adam, Christ, we can be lifted up, even through the world, modern education and the Devil are against us, the word of God and Christ is sufficient. God has said, "Train up a child in the way it shall go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." There is no place like the home for the laying of the foundation of character in a human life. It is there that a child's first and most lasting impressions are made. There he finds or ought to find, the material out of which he begins to build his ideals and conceptions of life. The child comes into this world knowing less and more helpless than any creature on earth and is dependent upon its parents will and instructions for its preparation it should have to meet the responsibilities and duties of life. To assert that because a child is human, and it must of necessity be turned over to the powers of evil, and be allowed to run the course, and sow its wild oats is an insult to God, and a cowardly shirking of responsibility.

Why not from the beginning surround the child with the thought of God, and a holy atmosphere.

Next to the Christian home in training a child and making the ideal man is the Christian school.

All religious education is the development of the whole man. It is this point that the Christian school must accomplish, if it realizes the purpose for which it exists. While its distinctive aim is commonly thought to be, so far as a religious instruction is concerned, the training simply of the spiritual nature, it is nevertheless true that the life in a Christian college should lead the student to co-ordinate and develop uniformly all the departments of his being. It should furnish him lofty ideals and exalted inspiration in the three fold life that he lives. He should rejoice in the innocent games on the play grounds, in the exercises of the class room and debating societies, and in those of the Bible class and prayer meeting, as all being legitimate sources of strength and power.

The Christian ideal should be permeated and include his entire school life, and all that he does should be essentially in making up his religious experience and establishing him in true holiness.

First we will consider his spiritual development. Perhaps if I were arranging this in strictly climatical order, this phase of Christian education should be reserved for the last, but I believe in the view point of the great teacher, heart education is the basis, foundation, the solid granite, on which the other structure should be built, Solomon said, "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge. The work of a Christian college is to first introduce its pupils to Christ who will forgive their actual sins and cleanse away their vent to sinning, filling them with the Holy Spirit, and develop its pupils to Christian living. A school may uphold religion in its class room, its management and in its prayer meeting, and be ever so tenacious or orthodox teaching, and yet be a nursery of due deceit and hypocrisy. This should be a matter to engage the most earnest and intelligent thought of the authorities of every Christian school. The administrative officers and faculty should study the problem of the Christian life of the student body as carefully as that curriculum or requirements for entrance of graduation. The spirit of Christian should be characteristic of the entire life of the college. The Holy Spirit should be so felt in the place, until it should be as the sunlight that falls caressingly upon the mountain top and on the meadow, and that slips silently into the nooks and corners, and that glides in at doorways and through windows, and that steals in through the cracks of the walls and roof. This Christian spirit should fill the whole social life of the school, even as the sweet perfume fills the garden of roses. It should be so vital a thing in the hearts of the college family, as to be the source of a living flow of character that refreshes and enlivens all the intellectual, social and spiritual life of the institution. It need not be, it must not be, a thing dogmatically taught by some staid professor in the so-called religious department but it must be the vital breath, the all filling, all inspiring atmosphere in the midst of which the students body shall move and from which it shall breathe in the power of an eternal life to this end, the Great Book, splendid collection of books, the most marvelous on earth living books, must be intelligently appreciated, and talked, and studied and lived. In fact, God should be put first in the whole college life, and the student should be urged, first to get God enthroned in their hearts to help them search for truth, to lift out the error and to give them the straight and narrow path while they are getting an education, and to prepare them in after life to be a living example of what Christ can do for a surrendered life.

Second, on the other hand the students should have a high intellectual training, counteracting the idea that there is any conflict between the highest education of the head and the deepest culture of the heart. Education is a subject upon which Christian people need to be aroused. Of all people that should have a liberal education is the man with a pure heart. One reason there has been so much reproach brought upon the Holiness movement, is that we have had a goal without knowledge, and while our hearts have been right, we have made many mistakes with the head and driven a great many good people away from us and our Christ. It is not enough to have the truth and to present the truth, but we must present the truth in the proper way. Many times people have gone away from our meeting and criticised us and not accepted the truth, not on account of the truth, but because it was presented in an offensive way. This can be illustrated by a very common illustration, and that is in the matter of food. We may buy the best and purest of groceries, but if we prepare it in a bad way, burn it, scorch it, and serve it in a very unattractive way, it makes us lose our appetite for it. So it is with the truth of God, and we as servants, ought to be careful as to how we present the truth and represent Christ. We ought to present it in the best language possible, in the best manner possible and make it as attractive as possible, and nothing will aid us more in this than true education. Those of us who are past the age of receiving a college education, can learn a great deal by observing those who have received education and studying cultured people, and the rules of etiquette, and try to present the truth in as refined and acceptable manner as possible. The Bible instructs us to be courteous, and who was more gentle and kind and thoughtful of the feeling of others than Jesus Christ, when he was on earth. When I think of how many blunders we make, and how we mar the truth in the way we present it, it makes me want to go down before my Christ in humility, and sit at his feet until I can absorb some of gentleness, kindness and loveliness. Because we have the truth and Christ is enthroned in our hearts, it doesn't give us licence to ruthlessly crush the feeling of others, and break the rule of common etiquette, but on the other hand, it should make us more gentle and thoughtful of others. Bearish ways never attract but repel. You never knew of anyone taking as a pet a bear, but you have the lamb, and when people criticise us, let's us notice and see if it is not because we are hearish instead of the truth of Holiness we are presenting. This doesn't mean to compromise in the least. I believe we can be just as true to God and do more good by first getting a pure heart and the higher culture of the head and body.

Third, is physical development. Athletics in most of our colleges are so brutal and have been degraded so until most Christian people have an aversion of it. Nevertheless, it is true that the youth must have an outlet, and we must have some form of athletics for physical development in our Christian schools. This can be done by introducing innocent games, and having systematic games, and having systematic training of systematic, exercises etc.. Our education should not be a natural. It should trend all the natural forces toward God and develop them to the highest perfection.

My prayer is that we as Holiness people, may catch the inspiration from Christ, and develop our whole beings to the highest possible state, so that we may be our best for Christ, and come nearer his ideal in the deepest spirituality of the heart, the broader education of the head, and highest development and culture of body.

CURING CATARRH

Accept Our Advice and Try This Remedy at Our Risk

Catarrh is a disease of the mucous membrane. The mucous membrane is, one may say, the interior lining of the body. Catarrh therefore may exist in any part of the system.

When the catarrhal poison attacks the mucous membrane, inflammation and congestion are produced and nature fails to throw off the accumulated poison. The organ which has been afflicted ceases to perform its proper function as nature intended it should. The result is, complication upon complication, which may lead to other even more serious afflictions.

We honestly believe Rexall Mucu-Tone will do wonders toward overcoming catarrh. It is made from the prescription of an eminent physician who made a long study of catarrh, and his great success with this remedy was an enviable one. We want you if you are a sufferer from catarrh in any form, give Rexall Mucu-Tone a thorough trial. Use it with regularity and persistency for a reasonable time, then if you are not satisfied, come back and tell us, and without question or formality we will hand back to you every cent you paid us. This is certainly the fairest offer that any one could make and should attest our sincerity of purpose. It comes in two sizes, prices 50 cents and $1.00. Remember you can obtain it only at—The Rexall Store. Haynes & Taylor.

"I wish to say that I have used Sloan's Liniment on a lame leg that has given me much trouble for six months. It was so bad that I couldn't walk sometimes for a week. TRAVIS-BIBBS

On last Sunday morning Leslie Bibbs and Miss Velda Travis boarded the train for Clarksville, Tenn., where they were married. As Miss Travis was not sure of the consent of her parents, went to the country Saturday and on Sunday morning boarded the South bound train at Repton, while the groom boarded the same train here. The young bride is the beautiful daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Travis and is one of the oldest and most highly respected families of the county.

The groom is a moral young man, respected by all who know him, with a paying clerkship in the Marion post office under Postmaster Geo. M. Crider.

While the wedding was a surprise to every one all their many friends join in extending to them hearty congratulations and good wishes for a long, happy and prosperous life.

Saves An Iowa Man's Life

The very grave seemed to yawn before Robert Midson, of West Burlington, Iowa, when after seven weeks in the hospital, four of the best physicians gave him up. His positively guaranteed for Stomach, Liver or Kidney troubles and never disappoints. Only 50c. at Jas. H. Orm and Haynes & Taylor.

A CARD OF THANKS

To my many friends who so loyally supported me in the Record-Press contest, I desire to publicly express my appreciation; while I was not successful in winning the first prize, I know I could never have fully appreciated these many warm friends had I not entered this contest. The constant support you gave me from the first and the many cheering words I received from you through the many weeks of the contest will always be fresh in my memory; and in your friendship, I feel that I have won a prize more valuable and more enduring than the one offered in the contest.

To the editor of the Record-Press, and the judges who made the various counts, I desire to thank you for your kind and fair treatment; I know the contest was fair in every respect and I am perfectly satisfied with the result. Again I wish to thank every one who in any way assisted me in this contest, and to assure one and all that I have but the kindest feelings for all.

Very gratefully,

ADDIE MAYNARD.

RESOLUTIONS.

We the Cumberland Presbyterian Church of Marion Kentucky feel very much under obligations to the good people of Marion for their kindness and liberality and brotherly helpfulness in aiding us to care for the annual session of the Kentucky Synod of our church.

These occasions sometimes over-tax the hospitality of the smaller towns. However in this instance offers of entertainment came from one and all and there was plenty of room and to spare.

We desire to return our thanks in this public manner, remembering especially the Methodist brethren for the use of their church and the Record-Press for the use of its columns.

TOBACCO TIDINGS

The District Board of the Stemming Association adjourned Tuesday afternoon, November 1, and the several members returned to their homes. Supplementing much routine work was the inspection and classifying of samples from all the counties, and more important than all else, the setting of the price on the 1910 crop.

Each committeeman saw for the first time samples from counties other than his own, and all the committeemen while not surprised, were much pleased to find fully borne out, by the samples from all the counties, confirmation of the prevalent high estimate of the extraordinary excellence of the 1910 crop.

Committeemen are unanimously of the opinion that crops are the best in ten years, or as one of the committee expressed it, in the presence of two others, "it is the equal of the best crop produced in the past twenty-five years."

The committee unanimously settled on the price of $8.00 per hundred average for the 1910 crop.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

De Forest, Wis.—"After an operation four years ago I had pains downward in both sides, backache, and a weakness. The doctor wanted me to have another operation. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I am entirely cured of my troubles."

Mrs. AUGUST VESTERMAN, De Forest, Wisconsin.

Another Operation Avoided. New Orleans, La.—"For years I suffered from severe female troubles. Finally I was confined to my bed and the doctor said an operation was necessary. I gave Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial first, and was saved from an operation."

Thirty years of unparalleled success confirms the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to cure female diseases. The great volume of unsolicited testimony constantly pouring in proves conclusively that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a remarkable remedy for those distressing feminine ills from which so many women suffer.

If you want special advice about your case write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

One Dollar the Year in Advance.

Blackford the enterprising city in Webster County, near our boundaries, is to vote Friday Dec. 2nd, on the question of establishing a graded school, and levying an ad valorem tax of 50 cts. and a poll tax of $1.50.

This is a move in the right direction and we trust the next will be to vote right and establish the school.

The election of J. W. Blue as County Judge, meets with approval and puts Mr. Blue in the line of promotion. A man who is popular enough to carry his home county by one hundred and forty majority when it is normally four hundred the other way, undoubtedly has the confidence of his own people and it certainly knocks out the old saying that "a prophet is not without honor save in his own country." We think Mr. Blue would make fine Governor of Kentucky. We regard him the equal mentally, of any man who has occupied that chair with the last decade and as a matter of justice Western Kentucky is entitled to a governor. Ollie James has done work enough in all sections of Kentucky for democratic party, to feel free to ask the hand of the next democratic convention for governor of the state. He could offer the name of one so capable and withal so honest as J. W. Blue.

still its President. He has not sought political preferment until the new state of Oklahoma was formed when he was urged to enter the race for the nomination for Governor. He was defeated in that race by Haskell but the people have shown by the great and complimentary vote, given him in the election just had, that they are glad of an opportunity to correct that mistake. Mr. Cruce has achieved what of success is his, unaided by wealth except of his own earning, but we might say his genius energy and native ability have been strongly assisted by his brothers who have all stood loyally by him in all his ambitions. Will and Cavitt made speeches and Laurence and Lave worked too, so reports have it. From the Ardmore we clip the following:

WILL CRUCE AS A POLITICIAN

Will Cruce, good old honest Will Cruce, has come back from a campaign of the western counties of a state. Will Cruce looks to be very much at home in the Sunday School, it seems natural to see him engaged in the trial of the most perplexing lawsuits that come up in the state, he seems most natural when addressing a jury of farmers, but in our imagination we can scarcely conceive just how he looks at campaigning the State. He tells his hearers that he is no politician and he is not. He never so much as dreamed out in his mind any vote catching schemes, much less attempted to put one into execution. But those who have heard him, say his logic is unanswerable. He goes at his crowd in rather an easy manner at first, his looks betray his absolute honesty and he does not stand before a crowd for one minute until the crowd is willing to take his word upon any question. And when the confidence and the enthusiasm of the crowd begins to reflect itself in the attitude of the speaker, Will Cruce becomes eloquent with his logic and home-spun expressions and it is said that no man in the state has done more effective work in the campaign than Will Cruce. And during the entire campaign he has arranged his speaking engagements so that he could be with his Sunday school except upon one occasion and that was caused by a late train which forced him to change his schedule. Will Cruce is not at all seriousness, but there is a funny side to his make up and he enjoys fun as much as any one else.

On his return trip he tells this story on A. C. Cruce. "At Hobart" he says, "I had the smallest crowd of any place I spoke. Whenever Will Cruce was announced in the circulars, good crowds came, but when I arrived at Hobart the first thing that greeted my eyes was a circular announcing that A. C. Cruce was to speak there that afternoon. Well, I knew that was the smallest crowd I had." He told the story with a great deal of sport in telling his brother.

When Will Cruce gets to one side where A. C. can't hear him he says, "I had the largest crowd at Hobart because he spoke there on a Saturday afternoon when all the farmers were in town, but he would not have A. C. know for any reasonable sum."

A great reception was tendered the Governor elect at Ardmore, his home and many speakers vied with each other in lauding the name of "honest conservative and unsullied Lee Cruce. The Ardmore closes the lengthy account of this reception as follows:

Amid the strains of "My Old Kentucky Home," Hon. Lee Cruce then stepped upon the stage, and for fully five minutes the air reverberated with the thunder of applause which greeted him and when the band broke into Dixie about half of the audience leaped to their feet and pandemonium reigned again. Quiet was finally restored and Mr. Cruce introduced Mr. Cruce.

Mr. Cruce thanked his home people for the splendid reception and stated that after he had completed his stewardship to the people of the state of Oklahoma that he would return to them and spend the remaining years of his life in Ardmore.

A New Idea In Food Flavors

Made by an improved process, which not only represents a saving of about 50 per cent. in cost, but a distinct gain in quality. An opportunity to explain fully, when I call at your homes will be appreciated. Respectfully,

OUR SILENT CITY

Any one who does not go often to the New Marion cemetery would be astonished at the improvements there, as well as the great care and attention given the last resting place of those beloved ones who have gone on before. Some of the recent evidences of remembrance, of those who lie buried there are of such handsome proportions as to demand more than passing notice. The last place of the beloved Dixon is now marked with a massive red granite slab. A Barrie granite monument is placed with name and dates of birth and death. The lot is with Indiana bleached stone. It all is in keeping with his modest life, elegant, refined unassuming. Mrs. Dixon spared neither money nor trouble in searching for memorials to please her taste. Green Johnson did the work.

Mrs. M. M. Wilson has had one of the handsomest memorials in the cemetery put up in the "Wilson Circle" to the memory of her husband. It has been said that no monument of marble could be lasting enough or high enough to be commensurate with the deeds of this good man, who in his 80 years of usefulness, and right living, did kindness to every one who came in touch with him. He took the lead and lent substantial aid to every enterprise in his palmy days and future generations will have his life and example to emulate when looking on the neat and beautiful monument marking his grave. Henry Bros. of this city were the contractors.

rest and most successiation in the state, and attracts a large number ators from every section state. The programmes of ifferent meetings are always practical and full of inspir-
m. The programme for the meeting at Wickliffe has just been published and is by far the strongest ever prepared by the association.

The programme for this year
includes an address by President H. H. Cherry, of the Normal school at Bowling Green, who is recognized as one of the ablest educators in the South, who is developing one of the grandest Normal schools in the entire United States and is hereby rendering an immeasurable service for the commonwealth.
A man of such a personality as to inspire everyone with whom he comes in contact.

Also an address by Dr. P. P.
Claxton, of the University of Tennessee, who has been a national figure in education for a number of years, and a leader in educational thought and action—a truly wonderful man.

Add to these a lecture by that king of American entertainers, Dr. Byron King, of Pittsburg, together with addresses by a large number of the leading educators of the state and you have a programme which no teacher, who expects to keep up with the great educational awakening in Kentucky, can afford to miss.

Superintendent C. W. Richards, of the City Schools, is President of the Association, and says he is expecting at least four-hundred teachers to attend this meeting, because of the excellence of the programme, and the low rates offered by the railroads, and a round trip excursion from Paducah on one of the best boats on the Ohio River.
Every teacher should plan to spend these two days at Wick-liffe, where he can combine pleasure with profit.

Willie And The Hobbie Skirt

Since ma's put on a hobbie skirt life ain't so sad no more;
I needn't give up playin' when she hollers from the door;
I hear her callin' "Willie!"
now, but I don't care at all, Because if she took after she would trip herself—and fall:
I'm glad the hobbie skirt's in style; I hope that it will stay,
For now I never have to mind
When pa has went away.
It used to be whenever I would get a chance to bat She'd always think of something which I should be workin' at;
I had to mind the baby or I'd have to rake the yard;
It seemed to make her gladdest
when she seen me workin'
hard;
But since she's got her hobbie
skirt I needn't care at all, Because if she took after me
she'd trip herself and fall.

was always tired, languid, and nervous, headaches were common

BIG TIMBER DEAL

That the big timber in this section has not been all cut before this seems almost remarkable, but during the past week or so, some of the finest logs that have been seen in this city for years have been hauled in to M. C. O'Hara, who is buying for the Hoosier Veneering Co.
Some of these logs measure fifty-four inches in diameter and scale 1500 feet of lumber. Mr.
O'Hara is afraid that winter will set in before his timber is all delivered, but should it do so, he will be ready to receive, as soon as spring opens.—Princeton

SNAKE POTATO A WON-

DERFUL FREAK OF NATURE

The most wonderful sweet potato ever seen in this part of the world is on exhibition in the Kentuckian office. It was raised by Willie Gray, on his farm near Hopkinsville and is a perfect reproduction of a snake coiled up with its head resting in the center of the coil.

The potato is of the Southern Queen variety and weighs less than eight ounces.

It is 31 inches long from the tip of the tail, which extends nine inches beyond the coiled body of the snake.

At the largest part it is 1 7-8 inches in diameter. The head is 3-4 of an inch broad and specks represented the eyes of the serpent. It grew to the vine at the point representing the snake's mouth.

The wonderful freak may be seen in the Kentuckian editorial rooms.—Hopkinsville Kentuckian.

West Burlington, Iowa, when after seven weeks in the hospital, four of the best physicians

Electric Bitters. For, after eight months of frightful suffering from liver trouble and yellow jaundice, getting no help from other remedies or doctors, five bottles of this matchless medicine completely cured him.
Its positively guaranteed for nes & Taylor.

A MAMMOTH POTATO

Mr. Cook Jones, the well known farmer of Slaughtersville section, brought to the Hustler office Wednesday the biggest thing in the way of a sweet potato we ever saw. It weighs 11 pounds and five ounces. It is of the variety known as the "Southern Sweet."
Mr. Jones says he has many of these potatoes weighing from 2 1-2 to 4 pounds.—Hustler.

Says State's Tax System

Is Detrimental To Growth.

A. Y. Ford, vice-president
the Columbia Trust Company, an address yesterday before leading rail-road authorities the city affiliated with the Transportation Club of Louisville declared that the tax system in vogue in Kentucky is mental in that it dis-
capital and dwarf po-
Mr. Ford was the guest at an informal dinner given the Transportation Club at at the Galt House, which attended by more than one hundred men representing rail-roads operating in and out of Louisville.
His address intensely interesting and held the attention of the railroad men throughout.

In the course of his remarks
Mr. Ford declared that other States, with no greater natural resources than Kentucky, have forged ahead of this State in recent years by reason of the fact that their tax laws have been made more favorable to labor and capital. He submitted figures showing where other States enjoy a more reasonable tax rate than Kentucky.—Courier Journal of Friday, Nov. 4th.

SIMIAN HUGS GIRLS

The other day as twenty work-girls came out of a dressmaker's shop in the Rue Boileau in Paris, France at midday an arm encir-led the waist of one of them.

The girls protested indignantly.
The too gallant intruder
was a hideous little person.

The girls began making fun of him, when suddenly he caught hold of one and put his face close against hers. She boxed his ears, and he dropped on all fours and bit her leg.

There was a panic. The girls rushed off shrieking, and two policemen arrested the aggressor. The creature was a chimpanzee, the pet of an explorer living near at hand. He was captured after a struggle and carried off by his master's cook, who went to fetch him at the police station, where he spent the night.

An amusing item of the
is that the magistrate got angry with the chimp
when he was first brought in cause he refused to answer a question. He was highly dissatisfied when told that he was talking to a chimpanzee. His shortbeing near sighted, did not know that.
